Sep 10, 2017 Q: Mongoose Model.findOneAndUpdate() returns undefined the problem is that I'm trying to use an API as a source for my MongoDB. I'm using the API at but I want to save the data I get to my database. When the page loads, I use $http.get to get the data. The data is OK, since when I show it in the console it shows the expected data. This is the data: But when I try to find it and save it, it always ends up with an undefined result. Here's the code of the function (POST var mongoose = require('mongoose'), Schema = mongoose.Schema; var userSchema = new Schema({ username: String, password: String, token: String }); module.exports = mongoose.model('user', userSchema); var user = require('./index'); const getToken = function(user){ return user.token }; async function getUser(token, userData) { console.log(userData) if (token) { var user = await user.findOneAndUpdate({ token: token }, { $set: userData }, { new: true, returnOriginal: true, safe: true }); if(!user) { return console.log("res"); } else { console.log("res2"); } } else { userData = await user.findOne(userData);
