Search Lyrics

The Internet isn't called the information superhighway for nothing, since you can surely find most, if not all info you need. This can simply mean looking up lyrics for songs of interest, but there are methods to do this without having to rely on your web browser. A suitable example in this regard is Search Lyrics, which can almost instantly show lyrics to songs of interest. First of all, you might want to know the application isn't packed inside an installer, so it can be used as soon as download is done. Note, however, that it completely relies on Java Runtime Environment, regardless of the computer you work on. On the bright side of things, Java dependency means you can use it even if the target PC isn't fitted with Windows. As far as the visual design is concerned, features are wrapped around a classic window frame, with a large field where detected lyrics are displayed, and several fields to define the song. The application doesn't come with it's own database, so you need to make sure that you have an active Internet connection for everything to work out. There are three fields by which to be able to find lyrics, namely artist, album, and song name. Not all of them are mandatory, but filling up more increases your chances of finding items of interest. It doesn't take a lot of time for the application to retrieve lyrics. The application is pretty straightforward, and the only way to look up lyrics is to manually write down details, with no option to integrate it in any media player. Fields don't remember past entries, and saving lyrics is only possible through the clipboard. To end with

Taking everything into consideration, we can state that Search Lyrics is pretty straightforward overall, but does manage to retrieve lyrics of interest in the end. Although fields don't remember entries, it doesn't take a lot of time and effort to retrieve lyrics, given you're constantly connected to the Internet.
