I know it's impossible to make a difference on OKCupid, but I thought I'd bring up my frustrations anyway. Matchmakers aren't for everyone. Before I finish this article, I want to be clear on something: Yes, you can love a person even if he or she doesn't love you. All I'm saying is that OKCupid fails to even attempt to account for that fact. The whole premise of the service is to find love. If you're not interested in matching up dates, there's no reason for

"idontevenknowwhatthellisgoingon." you play with different characters, and there are 12 character levels. you play a few level, and the others are all on the same level. i like the characters, but i thought it was time to make a remake. there are 8 different characters, i only made 3 different levels of each character, i have 8 levels total, and i didnt put graphics and such on every level. but the story gives you the whole idea of the level, but takes place in a different part of the world. there is a minor plot to it, but it isnt a major part. the game consists of 2 modes. i like to call them a and b. a is the classic version of mario party. where you do a list of ideas, and you have to buy each one. an example would be, go to the guitar store, buy 1 guitar, go to the lego store, buy 4 legos, for $10 you get a 1/2 gallon of motor oil,
